HYDERABAD ROCKATHON 2018

The Hyderabad Rockathon 2018 held at Fakruddingutta on 9th Dec was yet another endeavor by the Society and the Great Hyderabad Adventure Club (GHAC) at infecting the citizens of the twin cities with a love for our great rocky landscape. Mr. Jayesh Ranjan, IAS, Principal Secretary Industries, flagged off the first of three rock walks and participated in it as well. He appreciated the Heritage value of the area and stressed, "Since the rock formations were associated with faith and worship, they continue to survive. But times are changing and more awareness and preservation initiatives are required to protect the beautiful natural rock formations." He also appreciated the conservation efforts of the Society and GHAC.

Flagging off the Rock Walk

The Rockathon saw an enthusiastic participation of all age groups with a lot of excitement around Ziplining & Rappelling, as always. Families got an opportunity to enjoy some team games organized by Uma Maheshwari. The Rock Quiz presented by Harshita, Aparajita and Dr. Bhan was an exciting closure to the Rockathon along with the Snake Awareness Programme by the Friends of Snakes. This year's addition was the presentation by the Ohara Chapter of Ikebana, Hyderabad, who showcased some beautiful flower arrangements with rocks and also demonstrated the creation of this Japanese flower art.

Many slogans, taglines and environment messages were coined by the participants on their social media posts and worked into the rock tattoos that many got painted on arms, hands and face.

Mr. Jayesh Ranjan enjoys Rock Biking

The vertical rock stacking challenge, along with the rock shot put & rock climbing tested the skill of participants. Despite a smaller turn-out this year compared to the six previous Rockathons, some city dwellers were converted into rock champions to further our cause !

Amardeep (the sporty voice of Rockathon!)*

“ WHY DOES INDIA’S GEOLOGICAL HERITAGE REMAIN AN UNCHAMPIONED CAUSE”

Excerpt from an article by our Member C.P. Rajendran, Professor of Geodynamics at the Jawaharlal Nehru Centre for Advanced Scientific Research, Bengaluru.

(Kindly read the informative article on the Society’s Website)

“Geo-heritage sites in many countries have been developed as geo-parks. Canada, China, Spain, the US and the UK have suitable provisions for the preservation and conservation of their national geo-heritage. UNESCO has also prepared guidelines for the development of geo-parks. Many countries also have the necessary legislation to build, protect and designate geo-parks. Europe celebrates its geological heritage across 73 zones.

Japan offers another good lesson in such conservation. The 1995 Kobe earthquake involved a fault that cut right through the town of Hokkudan, with one side rising up by a metre. The city administration constructed their earthquake memorial park around 150m of this rupture to preserve this fault. What greater educational experience could one aspire for? The devastating Latur earthquake of 1993 had also generated a vertical ground rupture of one meter near the Killari town. This year marks the 25th anniversary of that devastating event. I don’t think if we have ever thought of creating a memorial park around this feature. We also had a catastrophic tsunami on the Indian east coast in 2004; over a decade later, we don’t have a suitable memorial.

The collective memory of such natural tragedies reinforced through memorialisation will go a long way in preparing communities over several generations to withstand similar eventualities. The Geological Survey of India is the custodian agency entrusted with the protection of geological features. Their website suggests more than 26 sites have been selected for preservation as part of their commitment. However, we are yet to see a concerted strategy from officials to this end. A major challenge for Indian geologists, including the Geological Survey, is the (non)existence of a complete inventory of geological structures in the country, and to see that all government developmental plans take full account of it. Educational outreach also needs to be organised for government officials and politicians about these irreplaceable treasures. And most importantly, we need to evolve practical mechanisms to protect and manage the geological heritage features.”
